Dear Commissioners:

Rooftop solar seems to be the hot-button issue in the talk of renewable energy. Anything that garners this much contention must have a lot of money attached for so many to be so passionate. It would be nice to consider it public good-will but the contentious language of groups like TUSK betray any altruistic concept.

It doesn't take much investigation into power generation to understand, while the sun might not charge for sunshine – solar is anything but free. Subsidies and net-metering regulations have made solar a misunderstood commodity. Those who fall for such chicanery are simply pawns in the scam of the solar installation companies and their quest for the quick buck until the truth becomes apparent.

As I understand it, APS has proposed leasing rooftops for installation of solar panels. In return, the customer gets a monthly credit of $30. Solar power generation with a credit for the use of roof space offers a legitimate and credible opportunity to augment the existing renewable power sources while allowing private citizens to take part in the development without risk.

This is a great opportunity for Arizona and I encourage you to approve the APS proposal.

Sincerely,

6242 E Carter
